A fraud strategy

- Get YOUR ethics right!
 - Fraud prevention starts at the top*
 - Make fraud prevention personal and incorporate it in the governance structures*
 - Look at all service providers and stakeholders' ethics*
- Document all FRAUD risks
 - Consider the cycles in a retirement fund (contributions, expenses, investments)*
 - Including incentives to commit fraud*
 - Do not forget errors...these could show control weaknesses*
- Document CONTROLS to prevent, detect and correct fraud
- Monitor compliance with controls and fraud strategy
- Be OPEN about fraud
 - Management that tries to hide fraud risks or frauds and does not openly communicate and learn is a prime target for fraud*

Do not be a fraud enabler

- Know who you are dealing with
 - Human resources is the gatekeeper and effective election of trustees is important
- Segregate duties
 - Especially when dealing with cash i.e. same person authorising must not be the same person paying
- Ask the questions
 - Fraudsters rely on the fact that you may not ask difficult questions
- Check, check and double check – scrutinise
- Ask WHY, WHY, WHY, WHY
- Keep a clean desk policy and enquire what is going on in your area
- Make it personal
- Educate, train and communicate
 - What is the cost of not doing the above?

Fraud example

- Valhandra van Cartier member of “Cartier Retirement Fund” is due a surplus payment. She phones in, hysterically sobbing, (she needs the payment to pay for her very expensive watch) to the call centre of “C U Right Administrators” stating that she still has not received her surplus payment.
 - The administrator pulls out the claim form received and it indicates the banking details. C U Right asks Valhandra to submit the claim form she submitted and it shows another set of banking details.
- What went wrong?
•Who do you think committed the fraud?
